IAM · ROLE OVERVIEW

Identity & Access Management (IAM)

Role of a Software Engineer at Relevance Lab

[Your Name] · Software Engineer · Relevance Lab

Made with GAMMA

IAM answers one question: who can access what?

Secure access starts by separating identity, permission, and oversight.

User

Someone requests access to a protected application.

Authentication

Verifies the user's identity.

Authorization

Determines what that user is allowed to do.

Application

Provides access within approved boundaries.

Access governance keeps permissions secure, visible, and reviewable.

Made with GAMMA

My role connects identity controls to real applications

HOW ACCESS MOVES THROUGH IAM

1

User request

Understand the access need and user context.

2

IAM services

Apply authentication, authorization, roles, and permissions.

3

Protected applications

Integrate services so approved access works in practice.

4

Monitoring & improvement

Troubleshoot issues and feed improvements back into security.

WHAT I DO

Build

Develop and maintain IAM solutions.

Control

Implement authentication and authorization patterns; manage user roles and access permissions.

Integrate & improve

Integrate applications with IAM systems and services; troubleshoot issues and continuously improve security.

Made with GAMMA

The IAM technology stack spans code, protocols, and delivery

Each layer supports a different part of secure, reliable access.

01	Programming	Java and Python for IAM services, automation, and application logic.
02	APIs & microservices	REST APIs and service integration connect identity capabilities to applications.
03	Identity protocols	OAuth 2.0 and OpenID Connect establish trusted, interoperable access flows.
04	Access experience	SSO and MFA make secure access simpler for users.
05	Platform delivery	Cloud, security, Git, CI/CD, and DevOps carry IAM into production.

Made with GAMMA

Secure identity creates seamless access

Improved application security.

Secure and seamless user access.

Reduced unauthorized access.

Better access management and compliance.

Scalable identity solutions.

Secure Identity. Seamless Access.

Made with GAMMA